The Four Empires of Mexico

By Dr. A. F. PRADEAU, La Crescenta

At the time Cortes arrived at Veracruz in 1519, the Mexican Empire was headed by Montezuma II, crowned 17 years before. He was a learned and brave ruler, but unfortunately he was superstitious. When informed of the landing of Cortes, the national tradition of Quetzalcoatl made him vacillate. He tried by diplomacy and gifts to keep the Spaniards away and did not fight until too late to stop their progress.

Cortes entered the capital of the empire, Mexico City of today, at that time named "Tenochtitlan", during the month of November, 1519. Within a few days the proud emperor of the Mexicas was a prisoner of the Spanish conqueror. On June 27, 1520, he died at their hands.

Numismatically speaking, the Mexicans did not have a monetary system, but any object of recognized value, less bulky and perishable than ordinary merchandise, was accepted in barter. Thus cacao beans were extensively used, one such bean being traded for two zapotes, 10 for a rabbit, and 100 for a slave. As in the case of the American Indians, colored shells had an ornamental value and multi-colored feathers and cotton fabrics were much in demand. For larger transactions gold dust, held in transparent geese quills, was used.

The copper pieces resembling Greek taus, referred to as "hoe money", "Aztec coin", "scraper money", "chopping knife", "hide scraper" or as the "earliest American coin" did not come into use as an object of barter until 1548, 12 years after the Mexico City mint had started coining operations. At that time, the "hoe" money, if new, had a trading value of one real; if worn, it was sold to be melted at 10 pieces for one Spanish real or 12½ cents.

Montezuma was followed by an older brother, Cuitlahuac, who for four months fought valiantly with the invaders and forced them to evacuate the capital on the Sad Night of July 8-9, 1520. Cuitlahuac, the 10th Aztec Emperor, died that same month, victim of smallpox, a disease introduced by a Negro who came with Cortes.

The 11th and last Emperor of the Mexicas was Cuauhtemoc, whose name signifies "the falling eagle". Cuauhtemoc heroically defended the capital city against the constant attacks of the Spaniards and their allied Tlaxcaltecas until July 13, 1521, when he was taken prisoner.

In the meantime, Royal Treasurer Alderete accused Cortes of having connived with the fallen emperor for possession of the Mexican treasure. In order to vindicate himself, the Spanish captain then ordered that the ex-emperor and two noblemen be subjected to burning of their feet until a confession was obtained. But the hero, who had braved death in its most awful forms, was not intimidated by the torture. Cortes, ashamed of the base part he was led to play, rescued the Aztec princes from their tormentors. Later, the ex-emperor, who had remained a cripple and prisoner of the conquerors, was hanged from a tree.

The Republic of Mexico in 1947 struck a 5-pesos coin with the effigy of the emperor in full war regalia; in 1950 a 50-centavos piece was issued, bearing the bust of this emperor in three-quarter profile facing right and with a falling eagle between the mint mark and the value.

JULIAN I

Comparatively few numismatists know of this colorful insurgent character of the War of Independence of Mexico, who under the pompous title of Julian I, proclaimed himself Emperor of the Huasteca. He rose in arms in 1810, ruled despotically and arbitrarily disposed of life and property, over a mountainous territory approximately 150 miles due north from Mexico City in the districts of Huichapam and Zimapan. His full name was Julian Villagran. He was married and had several sons, the most famous being Chito.

During one of the many attacks of the Spanish forces, Chito was compelled to abandon the position he held. He mounted his horse and attempted to escape, but his steed, having had its ears filled with quicksilver by an unfaithful servant, could not hold a steady course. Chito, seeing that his pursuers were gaining on him, tried to detain them by scattering handfuls of gold doubloons in their path, but despite this stratagem, was captured. The Spanish commander tried to use his prisoner as a pawn to obtain the submission of the father, who, too proud and patriotic to barter his position, majestically exhorted his son to die with dignity. Chito was shot at Huichapan (State of Hidalgo) on May 14, 1813.

On June 13 of the same year, the elder Villagran, betrayed by one of his officers, was captured and sentenced to be shot. On the way to his execution, Emperor Julian I, who was an extremely strong man, surprised his guards by knocking down a mule that had stepped on the royal foot with a single blow of his powerful arm. The execution took place June 21, 1813, at the entrance of the imperial palace at Huichapan. Julian's head was severed from his body and was impaled along with that of Chito's.

Numismatically, he is remembered by a circular counterstamp used to validate Spanish-Colonial coins circulating in his dominion. It bears his name in two lines: VILLA-GRAN.

AUGUSTINUS I

The third Mexican Empire was headed by Agustin Iturbide, a Spaniard, whose parents migrated to New Spain (Mexico of today) in 1783, just before the birth of the future ruler of Mexico. When 15 years old, the youth joined the Spanish-Colonial army at the service of Charles IV, King of Spain, but did not see active service until Oct. 30, 1810. Having turned down the entreaty of Hidalgo to join the movement for independence, Iturbide proved himself to be the most malevolent and relentless foe of the liberators.

In 1816, because of the severity and abuse of authority displayed, Iturbide was mustered out of the army, only to return four years later when the new Spanish Constitution was proclaimed. At that time, Iturbide obtained command of the Spanish-American Royalist Army of the South of New Spain and immediately began conducting a series of intrigues with the revolutionary leaders, which culminated in the complete independence of Mexico in September, 1821.

A regency was appointed to rule the newly-created State and Iturbide, as commander-in-chief of the Army of the Triple Guarantee, headed it. On the night of May 18, 1822, a sergeant named Pio Marcha, leading a group of wild and boisterous rogues, mutinied around the national palace and proclaimed Iturbide Emperor of Mexico.

His reign was short-lived. He abdicated and sailed for Europe May 11, 1823. On April 28, 1824, the Mexican Congress declared Iturbide a traitor, and upon his return the following July, he was captured and shot.

The coinage issued by this monarch consisted of 8- and 4-escudo gold pieces and silver in the usual denominations except the 4-real value which was not struck. Copper specie, authorized on two different occasions, never was issued, but the first paper money of Mexico made its appearance in 1- and 2-peso denominations.

MAXIMILIANO I

Ferdinand Joseph Maximilian, Archduke of Austria, was selected by Napoleon III as the fourth and last Emperor of Mexico.

The country had been in the throes of revolution and during the intervening 38 years (1823-1861) there had been 58 governments in the Republic of Mexico! It was only natural that a number of excesses occurred in which Great Britain, Spain and France felt offended. They united to form the Tripartite Alliance and their combined naval squadrons took possession of Veracruz on Dec. 14, 1861.

Soon after, the first two powers desisted, but France, safe in the knowledge that the Monroe Doctrine could not at the time be enforced, persisted in her dreams of conquest. With that end in view, she sent an army of 42,800 French, Belgian and Austrian soldiers to which 20,280 Mexicans under Miramon, Mejia and Marquez joined forces. After 14 months of land fighting, suffering reverses at times, but victorious in the end, the imperialists entered Mexico City on June 7, 1863.

Although Napoleon and his wife Eugenia had selected Maximilian to rule Mexico during the fall of the year 1861 and his name had been presented to the Chamber of Deputies by Billault on June 27, 1862, a farcical Council of Notables met in Mexico City and on July 10, 1863, resolved that the crown be offered to Maximilian.

Four days prior to that meeting, a medal had been issued in the name of the Council proclaiming the Austrian prince. In due time, Maximilian and Carlotta were crowned rulers of Mexico, the prelude of a tragedy that ended on June 19, 1867, with the execution of Maximilian.

Inaccurately, the introduction of the metric system in the coinage of Mexico has been attributed to Maximilian; nevertheless, the gold, silver and copper specie issued by his government is based on the decimal system and, by proclamation, attempts were made to retire from general circulation the coins of the old real and escudo varieties.

There were 11 mints in Mexico, and while 10 of them were at one time or another controlled by the imperialist forces, only four of them issued Maximilian coins. They were the Mexico City mint, and the ones at San Luis Potosi, Guanajuato and Zacatecas. There was only one value in gold, but the silver consisted of 1-peso, 50-, 10-, and 5-cent pieces; of copper, only the 1-cent piece of 1864 was struck.

CHARLES L. RUBY

By CHARLES V. KAPPEN

Including more than 1000 varieties and states of dies, the large cent collection of Dr. Charles LeRoy Ruby, Fullerton, is one of the two largest on the West Coast and one of the largest in the country. Nearing completion of collectible cents, it contains many rarities, including the Crosby 9I of 1793. Only five large cents are needed to complete the set.

Charley began collecting coins during World War I. His interest was first drawn to Lincoln cents because Abraham Lincoln was his ideal American. Later, large cents became his top interest. In his 35 years of collecting large cents, he has known personally many of the series specialists, among them Newcomb, Hines, Clapp, Dr. French, Homer Downing, Dr. William Sheldon, Walter Breen and C. D. Smith.

"Early U.S. history fascinates me and I study it through U.S. coins. No coins are so dear in our history as are Colonials and the early issues of cents and half cents," Ruby believes.

His half-cent collection also is nearing completion and at present he is improving conditions of both half cents and large cents. He has been comparing notes on half cents with Walter Breen for years.

Charley also boasts one of the largest and most complete dime collections, most of his dimes being uncirculated or proof. He has more than 150 U.S. silver dollars before 1804, many of them rarities. The dollars are complete from 1836 to 1935, excepting the 1870S. He also collects U.S. "freaks". His U.S. collection lacks only such rarities as the 1804 dollar and the 1913 Liberty nickel.

Ruby's numismatic library consists of about 50 volumes, principally U.S. general and including all material on U.S. cents, half cents and Colonials.

He is a charter member of the California State Numismatic Association and of the Long Beach and Garden Grove Coin Clubs. He is a member of the American Numismatic Association, American Numismatic Society, Los Angeles, Orange County and Bay Cities clubs. He prizes highly an honorary life membership granted him by the Indianapolis Coin Club.

He has served on the board of directors and as president and secretary of the Orange County Coin Club. He was a member of the ANA board of governors for two years. A member of the ANA Textbook committee, he is working on the outline for a text on U.S. coins to be published at a later date.

He received the ANA Medal of Merit in 1951, second place exhibit award at the Cleveland convention in 1954 and first, second and third awards at various CSNA conventions. He won a second award for his National Coin Week exhibit in 1952 and honorable mention several times.

Besides coins, he collects first editions, stamps, guns, autographs, autographed pictures, Indian artifacts and oil paintings. Other hobbies are hunting, fishing, traveling and raising oranges.

Charley was born on a farm near Carthage, Ind., Dec. 28, 1900, the son of Edgar V. and Mary Emma (Butler) Ruby.

He was graduated from Carthage High School and has attended Indiana University, Indiana State, Indiana Central Normal College, U.S.C., U.C.L.A., University of California, Stanford, Olympic and Pacific College of Law, and has earned AB (1924), LLB (1925), MA (1929), BS (1931), JD (1931) and PhD (1933) degrees.

Ruby was married Aug. 30, 1926, to Miss Rachael E. Martindale. The Rubys have three e h i l d r e n, Mrs. Phyllis Arline Braskit; Dr. Charles L. Ruby Jr., who received his PhD degree from Princeton in 1952; and Martin Dale Ruby. Mrs. B r a s k i t teaches in Modesto High School and her husband is a chemical engineer with California Research, Richmond.

Charley was admitted to the bar in 1926 and is a member of the Stanford Law Society. He has been a professor of law and eeonomies at Fullerton Junior College since 1929. Other positions held have been with the U.S. Civil Service, as a practicing lawyer, athletics director and coach, teacher, high school prineipal and principal of schools. He has several b u s i n e s s interests aside from his teaching at Fullerton.

Ruby is president of the Fullerton S e c o n d a r y Teachers' Organization and of the Orange County Teachers' Organization. He wrote "Stand Up and Be Counted" for the Deeember issue of the CTA Journal, publication of the California Teachers Assoeiation, of which he is a member.

A past president of Rotary, he has been a delegate to five international conventions. He is a member of the National Edueation Assoeiation, Veterans' Club and Methodist Church. During the war, he instructed in the V5 and V12 programs. He is an Orange County deputy sheriff.

He has given more than 100 talks on coins during the past five years. He has taught Sunday School class for 15 years. He is listed in Who's Who in American Education.

"However great my thrill in collecting, my greatest satisfaction is in working with young people who are getting started with their collections. If I can help some youngster start a hobby that will give him the enjoyment and feeling of aehievement that I've had for many years,—and hope to have for 35 more—then I'll be most happy," Charley said.

"I've met some wonderful people through my hobbies and have made friends throughout the U.S. This makes life more interesting and worthwhile," he concluded.

M. C. Harmon, 'King Of Lundy Isle', Dies

Martin Coles Harmon, 69, sometimes k n o w n as "King of Lundy Island", died Dec. 5. Harmon bought the 1047-acre island in 1925 for $80,000 from the Rev. C. H. Heaven.

Beeause the island is outside the three-mile limit, Lundy contended it was not under British jurisdiction. He coined his own money, issued his own stamps and made his own laws. His 12 "subjects" paid no taxes nor liquor duties.

Two eoins (tokens) were issued in 1929, puffin and half-puffin denominations, equivalent to the English penny and halfpenny. "Puffin" was made the s t a n d a r d beeause more than 100 years ago the islanders traded feathers of these sea parrots to mainlanders for other goods. A full-length bird is pietured on the reverse of the 1-puffin, while half a bird is shown on the ½-puffin. Harmon's portrait is on the obverse and on the edge the motto, "Lundy Lights and Leads", appears.

The British government in 1930 fined Harmon 5 pounds for coining p u f f i n s and told him to stop the practice. He lost an appeal in the high court a year later.

Two Ways To Sell a Coin Collection

The question of how to sell a coin collection to best advantage eventually confronts every collector, or the executor of his estate. There are two ways, ordinarily, and some of the good and bad points of each are summarized in the following.

THE CASH SALE. It may be feasible to arrange a sale for cash to a dealer, collector or auction cataloger. This is the quickest and most desirable method if you can manage it. In a cash deal you escape all detail work, follow-through and bother. All your uncertainties and worries are over the moment the cash is paid. However, sometimes it is difficult to find a buyer who can pay several thousand dollars in cash for a specialized collection. When you do find him, with cash he is willing to spend, his offer may be so low that you feel you are being robbed.

Also, as a preliminary to a cash deal, the owner may have to take time off to hunt up the buyer, may have to bring the coins to him and spend hours with the prospect while the coins are being checked, only to have to refuse the offer and renew the search for a better price. Some dealers will call on the owner, though the collection must be fairly extensive to warrant this.

The cash sale, then, is the best if a buyer can be found readily who (1) wants the coins, (2) has the cash to pay for them and (3) is willing to pay a price the owner will accept. Remember that if a dealer advances the cash and is willing to take the time and care to make a good sale, he is entitled to his profit for this service.

CONSIGNMENT FOR AUCTION SALE. Auctions, on the other hand, undoubtedly bring the highest return to the owner because by this method he sells each coin, individually, to the highest bidder. If the cataloger has a good, active mailing list, amazing prices often are realized. To offset this higher price there are several disadvantages: it takes a long time to advertise and complete an auction sale; even the larger buyers at auctions are slow to pay and sometimes the "successful" bidders return coins.

Altogether, several months must elapse from time of auction consignment until final payment. Sometimes the cataloger will complete the payment when 80 or 90 per cent of the money from the sale is in. However, at the time of consignment, all details should be agreed upon, including, of course, the amount of commission. This will vary with different catalogers from 10 to 30 per cent.

TO SUMMARIZE: The cash sale is quickest but may not be easy to make and prices are sure to be relatively low. The auction sale will take more time but should bring the highest prices. If you choose this method, select the cataloger with care and be sure to have an understanding about terms and the amount of time that may elapse before final payment is completed.

Other exhibitors were Abe Kosoff with a beautiful display of pattern coins and Charles Ruby with displays of sets of U.S. nickels, dimes, quarters and Barber dollars in proof and uncirculated condition. These mounted sets were acclaimed by all to be the finest conditioned coins ever displayed in complete sets. Winn Osborne, program chairman, introdueed Dr. Gleason L. Archer, Pasadena, a member of the staff at Fuller Theological Seminary, who gave an address on "Coins of the Bible". Not only was this talk by Dr. Archer a most fitting one for the Christmas holidays, but many listeners said it was the most educational and interesting that we have had in a long time.

San Bernardino Co. Coin Club

The 79th regular meeting of the San Bernardino Coin Club Jan. 20 was attended by 41 persons; 36 members and five guests.

President John Yribarne announced the resignation of Mrs. Ernest Kessler as recording secretary, and appointed your reporter, Mrs. Thelma Snyder, by the simple expedient of overruling all her objections, for an assured period not to exceed three months. To Mrs. Kessler we of the SBCCC say, "Thank you for a job well done."

Guest speaker was Mr. Whittier, whose topic was "The Importance of Coins to the Japanese". He and his wife lived in Japan four years and made quite a study of Japanese coinage. Whittier brought back many specimens, which he displayed. His talk reflected a knowledge of the minting of Japanese coins and he explained how they were used other than as a medium of exchange. Mrs. Whittier, who also is interested in coins, was present.

Fred Draper told of his visit with Dr. C. L. Emmons who, he said, is recuperating nicely.

Colored slides were projected by L. M. Frantz, who showed pictures taken by him at Riverside during the CSNA convention there.

In keeping with the Christmas spirit, the club presented each one present an uncirculated 1954-D half dollar. Dale Howard, in behalf of the club, presented the gifts. The president gave a set of colored, engraved pencils to each officer and board member.

Bryan Burke, program chairman, introduced Don Smyser, speaker of the evening. Allen, Dick Flemming, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton and son, Jim, and Mesdames Lester Mensinger, John Yribarne, Charles Colver, and Herbert Bergen, wife of the guest speaker.

He displayed large currency in connection with his talk, and displayed a frame of fractional currency, a rare item for any collector. Members also enjoyed viewing his book of pictures which were taken at the state convention recently held in Riverside.

W. V. Barrett displayed his complete set of proof nickels and a Coronation proof set. Dr. Calvert L. Emmons, who was reported ill in the San Antonio Hospital in Upland, was designated "collector of the month". His display consisted of a complete set of gold dollars dating from 1849 to 1889, and an uncirculated set of half dimes.

With the purchase of door prize tickets, each member or guest received an uncirculated 1954S quarter and a 1954 cent piece. L. M. Frantz donated a pair of earrings to be given to the first woman to win a door prize. Mrs. Mensinger won. All door prizes were won by women with the exception of two won by Frantz.

TREASURY BUILDING CLEANUP

The treasury building is being cleaned for the first time since it first was occupied in 1839. It is one of the oldest government structures.

After undergoing a chemical steaming process, the granite will be bird-proofed to discourage pigeons and starlings that have roosted on its porticoes.

Estimated cleaning cost for the six-month job is $52,350.

S.F. Mint To Cease Coining Operations

After more than 100 years as a hard money factory, the San Francisco Mint will cease coining operations by June 30, possibly as early as March.

William H. Brett, director of the mint, said the move, together with closing of the Seattle assay office, will save the Government about $400,000 a year. A surplus inventory of coins has been built up because of reduced unit production costs and increased production in recent years. In 1943 a dual die, which doubled production with the same number of employes, was perfected. Manufacturing costs are as low as at Denver, but distribution costs are higher. Only four of the 36 Federal Reserve Banks have been supplied from San Francisco. They now will get their coins from Denver.

The present staff of 148 will be cut to 84, the remaining 64 employes being absorbed by other Civil Service jobs.

The San Francisco Mint, established in 1854, five years after the start of the gold rush, will continue as the Nation's largest refiner of gold and silver and as an assay office and repository. Gold from the Seattle assay office will be moved there.
